

Public Service

NIGEL BRISTOW
Department of Adult
Correction,
Division of Community
Supervision

Nigel Bristow has worked for the State of North Carolina for 12 years. He began his career in Rockingham County as a probation officer before transferring to Anson County, where his hard work and dedication led to his promotion to chief probation officer in 2018. Bristow's leadership and selfless service extend far beyond the office walls as he has dedicated every aspect of his life to serving his community.

Bristow actively works to better the lives of those in his community through volunteering with various local organizations. He is the chairman of the board for the Ashley Chapel Community Organization Center and is on the Board of Directors for New Horizons Life and Family Services, Richmond County's domestic violence agency. Bristow is also working to develop and strengthen connections between the various community centers within Richmond County so they can share resources to better serve the community. Additionally, Bristow chairs the Richmond County Reentry Council, which helps connect those recently released from prison with services in the community.

Bristow played a key role in launching Enriching Richmond County, an organization dedicated to enhancing the quality of life of all Richmond County residents. As the organization's founder, Bristow has led several initiatives through Enriching Richmond County to provide valuable information and education to residents while forming partnerships with numerous agencies to make needed resources more accessible for Richmond County residents.

Nigel Bristow's work has enriched the lives of those in Richmond County immeasurably. The State of North Carolina thanks him for being an admirable role model of exceptional public service for all North Carolinians.